Community members participate across five core program areas

Family Support Services

More than 700 households partnered with Family Support Services, including 300+ one-on-one goal-setting meetings and more than 300 completed utility assistance applications.

Older Adults

256 older adults engaged through monthly Aging Wellness Workshops, averaging 20-25 participants, covering topics participants requested, including technology, safety, housing rights, mental health, and healthy aging. Field introduced participants to new spaces, reducing isolation and building lasting friendships, while one-on-one coaching connected older adults to benefits many hadn't known they qualified for, including $5 Botanic Gardens entry through SNAP and a free replacement heating system through Energy Outreach Colorado's CARE program.

Early Childhood Home Visitation

178 families and 190 children reached through 3,913 home visits, with 94% of families completing at least 75% of their planned visits. Parent Possible's most recent site evaluation found parents' confidence in helping their child manage frustration rose from 61% to 100%, and that 100% of parents agreed that PAT helped strengthen their relationship with their child. HIPPY children's Bracken School Readiness scores rose sharply in numbers and counting (22% to 65% mastery), shapes (37% to 71%), and letters (25% to 63%).

Huerta Urbana

721 households, including 420 children, served across 18 weekly markets, with 19,457 pounds of food distributed, including 2,376 pounds grown on-site. $64,419 in booth bucks used by families to access food at no added cost, plus 790 bounty bags distributed to households facing food insecurity.

Youth Ignite and Youth Advisory Committee (YAC)

In its first year, the YAC engaged 9 youth advisors, and the summer cohort welcomed 20 youth in session one and 16 in session two. Youth who attended a field trip to Huerta Urbana's farmers market asked to return as volunteers, and several summer participants have since asked to join the YAC
